

5 Phases

The five phases correspond with the five stages in Carlo DiClemente's Stage of Change model with the belief that individual participants begin in the Pre-contemplation Stage and then accordingly move through the Contemplation, Preparation, Action, and Maintenance stages. Treatment, interventions, and program requirements in each drug court phase mimic the needs for each corresponding stage of change.